Description

Base Cream is an unscented base ingredient. It can be used plain or you may like to add some essential oils of your choice (generally a maximum dilution rate of 1% is advised).

Try placing some of the base cream in a smaller easier to use jar or other container and add your own oils. Mix thoroughly and always perform a patch test on small area of your skin. Once you are happy with the blend then you can increase the volumes used to use the rest of the cream. To do this, place in a bigger bowl, add your essential oils and give it a really good stir. Then return to a dark glass jar and keep in a cool place out of direct sunlight.

There are many different aromatherapy recipes you can use. Simply search the internet or see our wide range of books for a plethora of suggestions.

Some essential oils will need to be diluted more than this and some are not suitable for application to the skin. Please check the safety information for each oil before use.

Contains Beeswax and so not suitable for Vegans.

250ml.

It's a very good product, you can mix with different types of things, especially mix with different aroma of different essential oils. To create your own cream.

After struggling to get my home made cream to quite the texture and consistency that I like it, I decided to try this instead. Very pleased to report that this is exactly what I needed. With some of my favourite oils blended into it, this cream is perfect for my face and body. This cream is a lovely texture, not greasy at all.

Love to add essential oils to this base cream! Tea tree and lavender abs are my favourites to use.

This is a very good all round cream. I find adding a little Evening Primrose Oil makes it just the right consistency for both face and hand cream. Having mature skin I add a few drops of Rosewood Oil for use on my face and Lavender Oil in the hand cream version. Extremely good value for money.
