Description

Jojoba is actually a wax rather than an oil, but acts as a light carrier oil and is a good base for many types of facial oil blends. One of the most remarkable qualities of Jojoba is that it closely resembles the natural sebum that our skin produces. This makes it a valuable oil for those with oily complexions as it may help balance and reduce the overproduction of natural sebum that often leads to breakouts. Rich in Vitamin E, Jojoba's versatile nature also make sit a great choice for those with dry and mature skin. It is particularly good for chapped and broken skin, and excellent for conditioning the hair. Try incorporating it into your skin and hair care regime.

After having my second baby I have been struck with hormonal hair loss, so I bought this to use as a hair treatment mixed with lavender and rosemary oil. It is very nourishing for the hair, and I will also use it on my skin, I found it a little difficult to wash out but all together a lovely product and my hair is looking super after using it. I will be buying a bigger bottle next time.
