Description

An incredibly versatile oil; Lemon Eucalyptus essential oil has many aromatherapy applications. When burned or vaporised it can help to protect against airborne viruses or infections and may help to soothe the symptoms of a cough or a cold, flu, sinusitis and catarh. It can also be blended in a carrier oil for a muscle and joint ease massage. Its stimulating properties may make it useful in helping to improve circulation and reduce muscular aches and pains (the Aborigines would have applied the crushed leaves to the skin to help ease muscular aches and pains and to help speed up the healing of wounds).

Lemon Eucalyptus Essential Oil

This is my favorite type of eucalyptus because it not only smells divine in my room diffuser blend, it also helped me with my allergic rhinitis with dry cough. I blended it with lavender essential oil in apricot kernel oil base and sniff it thru a tissue. A few days use is all I needed and my cough miraculously gone for good!

Is a great lifter, excellent to have in the bath and just the refreshing smell you need to inhale which helps all ailments, this is one to have by default in your collection, it smells great mixed with Lavender and Tea Tree
