Description

Rosehip Seed Oil is rich in omega 3 essential fatty acids and contains vitamins C, E and F. Ideal for a variety of cosmetic uses, including creams and creams or lotions for the soothing of scars, burns and other skin blemishes.

Can be used as it on the skin or in a cream or lotion. Renowned as being one of the best rejuvenating and regenerating ingredients available. Research carried out in Chile over the last 30 years has suggested Rosehip to be effective in the treatment of scars and while it's suitable for all skin types it's especially recommended for mature, damaged and dry skin.

A wonderful oil to incorporate into any skincare regime.

Rosehip Seed Oil is reputedly full of compounds that work wonders for the skin. I've used it as one of the components to make homemade moisturiser for my ultra-dry skin, as a move towards solely utilising natural hand-made products whipped up in my own kitchen. I apply the resulting lovely rich cream at night, after cleansing then rinsing with cold water. Now all I need is recipe for making my own shampoo! I now look 22 instead of 55...;) Love it!

Reading all about the fantastic properties of this oil, I was eager to try this myself. However, it is an oil I cannot use due to the allergic reaction to Vitamin A (Retinol) in this product. I am very sensitive to any products and this broke me out in terrible acne. Being 40 and looking like a teenager is not much fun! So please make customers aware that this product may cause allergic reactions to sensitive skin types. What saved me was the calendula and aloe vera cream I purchased before. My skin is now getting back to normal and panic over.
