Description

Sandalwood Amyris Essential Oil comes from a small bushy tree with white flowers growing wild in Haiti. A less costly substitute for Sandalwood Vanuatu or Sandalwood Mysore, Sandalwood Amyris is good to use with a vaporiser or burner, either on its own or blended with cedarwood or other woody oils. Can be used blended in a cream or lotion to help revitalise mature skin types. . Widely used in high-end creams and lotions as a cheaper substitute for true sandalwood. Sandalwood Australian or Sandalwood Vanuatu are better suited for blends that will be applied to the skin or used in the bath.

Sandalwood Amyris Essential Oil

I've used this to diffuse with lavender and ylang ylang. Simply perfect!

I am rather impressed with this cheaper version of a Sandalwood oil, I tend to use it in a burner mixed with a v.high quality Sandalwood oil either Australian (Spicatum) or Indian (Mysore). It seems to act as a wonderful base note/tone, seals in a more expensive Sandalwood oil and helps bring out the true tone of the other oil making it last longer. Additionally it is far more sustainable and better for the environment to use this Sandalwood Amyris oil. I also mix it with avocado oil for an all over body skin treatment after being in the sun, especially whilst I was living abroad in Spain:) A good inexpensive versatile oil.
